The Florida Four

Sarah Kell, Caleb King, Laura Schoenherr, and Justin Steinke (pictured) spent a week this summer helping out at a Bible soccer camp at St. Paul's in Beverly Hills, Florida. They were four of more than 120 MLC students who signed up for MLC Daylight USA ministry opportunities like this one last spring and summer.

The best part? "It was definitely having the opportunity to share God's Word with my group of kids while also teaching them to play such a great game in soccer!" Caleb said. "All the sightseeing we got to do was really incredible too."

Sarah added, "It's such an amazing experience, and you learn a lot. It really prepares you for future work that you'll be doing."

Daylight USA possibilities, some facilitated by Kingdom Workers, include teaching at music camps, coaching at sports camps, canvassing, and helping with vacation Bible schools. Someday you too could grab a couple of friends like the Florida Four and use your God-given gifts to spread his Word!

A Taste of Urban Ministry

Last weekend, MLC students gathered at Flandrau State Park for food, fun, fellowship, and most importantly, to learn about urban ministry. The annual Urban Ministry Cookout is an excellent way for students to hear about gospel opportunities in their own backyards—specifically cities like Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

Emily Muir (LPS / Trinity-Watertown WI), a sophomore in the urban ministry cohort, describes the get-together as "a great chance for those who taught in the Milwaukee summer schools to share their teaching experiences and get other students informed and interested in urban ministry."

Professor Benjamin Clemons, head of the urban educational ministry program, and other members of the cohort were thrilled that over 40 students attended the cookout. They're eager to keep spreading the word about urban ministry both throughout and beyond MLC's campus.

During the cookout, Jesse Rider (GFW HS-MN / Immanuel-Gibbon MN) enjoyed playing games with fellow students interested in urban ministry.
