If you've been to our campus, then you've probably met one of them. Our student ambassadors serve as the face of MLC by giving tours, writing letters, and answering all your burning questions! They are the students' mouthpiece to incoming first-years, offering advice and insight in a way only a student could. Ezra Blumer says, "We aim to highlight the good things about campus and provoke excitement for the ministry. It's a joy letting incoming students know that if you want to get paid to share Jesus for the rest of your life, this is the place to be."

Being a student ambassador opens the door to new ministry experiences that benefit not only the prospective students but also the student ambassadors themselves. "I was given the opportunity to attend the WELS Youth Rally in Knoxville, Tennessee, this summer and had a blast!" Claire Tomhave says. "It was an incredible experience to worship with so many teens around my age and be surrounded by fellow Christians who know and love Jesus. My favorite part was interacting with the ones who came to our booth with questions about MLC and encouraging them as they considered how they could best use their gifts and serve their Savior."

The student ambassadors benefit incoming students by being genuine. They aren't trying to sell MLC. They just want to bring as many people into the ministry as possible. Natalie Luebke says, "Since this is my second year working as a student ambassador, it's been so cool to see those I gave tours to, wrote letters to, and now get to know on campus! Student ambassadors are able to show off the campus and life at MLC in a completely personal way and curate their tours to the prospective students' interests. It's not only a blessing to attend this school, but it's also an honor to represent MLC as a student ambassador!"
